IFA | As an innovative research institution, the Institute of Production Systems and Logistics (IFA) wants to offer its students, staff members and visitors an innovative space for creative developments. Since last year, IFA has been given a new appearance.

The purpose of the institute's newly created Idea Lab is to change outmoded communication structures and create an open working atmosphere. The idea of Professor Dr Peter Nyhuis and his team is to initiate the development of creative ideas aside the familiar working environment. The inspiring working atmosphere is achieved by an open room concept with three subareas, giving staff members and training participants the opportunity to build and re-build teams depending on the specific task.
